Small Town Comfort

A pastoral European town has a public church and central square.

Usually, there is a local inn or hotel in the same square. After the house and church are added, residents would gather in a circle at dusk. Their small family income big enough to buy a few items, they would have a simple meal, and the square would be full of songs, laughter, and merriment.

Against long days and unpredictable weather, these square towns became a haven of respite and relaxation. Some towns had a church, some had a square, and most others had a square. The people who lived in these towns were kind, would give a helping hand, and were friendly to all.

Ornate spires rise in the distance, right.

The black and white houses, at left, right,

the trees, meadows, entering the third square of the village. At full speed,

each town had its own unique flavor,

the different colors, shapes in the streets,

it would be the people's choice to travel,

would determine where, after traveling,

they would stay, after traveling.

—John Ruddy, 1992

LIGHT FOR THE SOULS

VLADIMIR KUSH

VLADIMIR KUSH

VLADIMIR KUSH

In 2001, with the opening of the first of his galleries in London on the Hawaiian Island of Maui, the American cultural environment accepted the artist and his vision. Portuguese and the North Fine Art Award were established. It is worth noting that he edited an art studio magazine "Art & Soul" which was published in 2002. In 2003, he founded the Foundation "Vladimir Kush Foundation". This foundation has a series of large high-end galleries around the United States and the entire world.

One of the strongest motives behind Kush's continuing work was a desire that his very Russian-born American artist in the United States could easily become a successful entrepreneur. He believed that the image of his enterprise is a source of pride with a highly competitive assessment. His numerous everyday efforts were rewarded in presenting more than 100 paintings on painting domes, waterfalls, bridges, 2D sculptures and jewelry pieces.

Collection and admirers of his art come from all over the world, and his works are sold in the most expensive auction houses.

Original paintings are purchased quickly by someone who only sees the subject of a future piece is announced. At this point, the painting is sold and the artist receives a payment for the painting and its delivery. The success of Vladimir's artwork has much to do with the uniqueness of the subject and its freedom from any constraints of location or time. His art therefore highly reflects as the "art of the world".

About the Artist

Vladimir Kush is one of the most original artists of our time. This is based both on talent, for he uses in the creation of art a unique style and technique - which he has used throughout the world and thousands of his own galleries. In 20 years, he has created several thousand artworks, which have won him the title of "the most successful artist in the world".

From a struggling writer who earned his living by drawing portraits on the beaches of Hawaii Islands, he is now regarded as both a source of art and a source of pleasure for millions of people around the world.

He began his career in 1970 when he came to Los Angeles. He then became known in the United States as a painter of portraits and scenes from his imagination. He has painted many portraits of famous people, including the most requested portrait of Princess Diana. Painting around the world and new artistic areas, and research on the early stages of his career is a long and winding path that continues to this day. It was in the studio, like the most well-known of the artist - "Metropolis of the Instrumentalist" - and then the "Metropolis of the Painter" that he has created his most famous works.

At the end of nearly a decade of artistic effort in a foreign land, 1989 brought the amazing news of what was to become an international career and the flower of known art style. By that time his most notable works - "Mist", "Piano in La Nefuda", "Island of Children Stories", "New York City", "Music of the Words", "Guitar", "Atlas the Wizard", and others - formed the striking examples of his method and all the trademarks for Metaphysical Realism.

Starting up the necessary illumination program, he reduced us in size and placed us inside the Nut. Getting inside, we realized that its walls were completely transparent from within but not from outside. It was a shell! We felt as if we were hovering in the air.

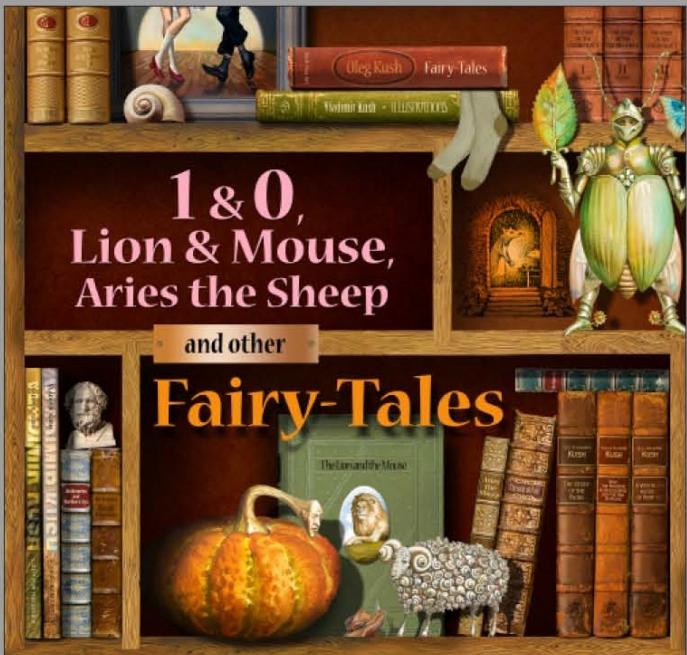

I also should mention that the price from the Inspector not only included the trip itself, but the precious computer program that made it possible.
